WHAT MAKES MARITIMO OCEANS APART?

When you consider that Australia is the world's largest island, it comes as no surprise it's home to the world's finest long-range cruising motoryachts. After all, with a coastline measuring almost 32,000 nautical miles in length, and facing the Indian,

Southern and Pacific oceans', it's the perfect place to test the skills of a boat builder. For Australia's Bill Barry-Cotter, that test has continued for 40 years, making him Australia's most awarded boat builder in the process. And this lifelong passion has culminated in the launch of Maritimo, a collection of luxury motoryachts without peer. In fact, nothing on water looks, feels or performs quite like the Maritimo. It simply manages to be both timeless and ahead of its time. It truly is oceans apart.

IT'S NOT GETTING TO THE TOP THAT MATTERS, IT'S HOW YOU GET THERE.

Getting to the flybridge on most boats of this size means scaling a steep, narrow ladder from an often wet and slippery cockpit. Which makes life hard enough for the skipper, let alone the thought of getting guests and supplies up top. But the new Maritimo 470 Offshore Convertible, like her larger siblings, features Maritimo's trademark internal staircase - making the luxurious flybridge accessible to everyone on board. It's yet another example of how clever design can deliver superior features without compromising living space. And that craftsmanship extends to performance and fuel efficiency thanks to Maritimo's legendary hull design and 9 degree shaft angle. Whether you're setting a consistent trolling speed, cruising to a favourite anchorage, or 'backing down' on a billfish, the power and balance of this Maritimo gives you complete control. In fact, the 470 Offshore Convertible leaves the competition in its wake. It's simply oceans apart.
